PRE-SEASON

GETTING READY TO GO TO AMERICA

Receive pre-course support and assistance from your training consultant ahead of your season. They will help you select the perfect resort for you, sort out your visa and make the pre-season process run smoothly.

WEEK 1

ARRIVAL, ORIENTATION & TRAINING BEGINS

On arrival in USA you will be met by an EA On Ground Program Manager in San Francisco. Evening one kicks off with a social catch up where you will get to meet the other course participants. The next day you get to explore a bit and organise any required essentials before a group dinner. Then it's time to jump on a plane, bus or train and head to your training resort!

When you first get there we'll run you through the program outline including goals and training objectives. We'll take you around for a ski resort orientation where you can check out the scenery. You'll meet your ski & snowboard school trainers and also collect your season passes. Expect some fun social events during this time as you get to know your fellow program participants.

Your first training days will be focused around developing your personal ski or board skills both on and off piste. You'll learn about stance and balance and get an introduction to key movements. By the end of this training block you have an understanding of the fundamental skills and the level one certification standards. On days off there'll be an opportunity to practice, consolidate and cover off indoor course materials in study groups.

WEEK 2

GET STUCK INTO TRAINING

During your next block of training days you'll continue to develop your personal ski or board skills. Your trainers will step up the tempo and get you into some more challenging terrain and hopefully to some local powder stashes.

WEEK 3

EXAM PREPARATION

Your last block of training days is geared toward getting you ready for the level one exam. You'll also spend time on developing your level one demonstrations, teaching progressions and practice group teaching scenarios. You also continue to develop your personal ski or board skills on a variety of terrain. On your days off there'll be an opportunity for you to shadow a ski & board school lessons and cover off indoor course materials in study groups including any pre-exam written modules.

WEEK 4

EXAM & BEGIN WORKING

The Level One Exam is basically an extension of the training days! The course is fun, informative and a chance to develop your teaching and personal skiing or riding skills even further. At the end of the exam module you should be walking away with a pass result! All going well you will start work in time for the busy holiday period!

PAST INTERN REVIEWS

Jonathon, Northstar

“My experience was definitely one for the books. Though I’ve skied off and on throughout my life, I wasn’t as prepared for the workout I got from having a fun, hands-on learning program as I did at the EA program in Northstar CA. It’s definitely a great way to get into a great passion that will open the doors for a worldwide career.

If you’re young, love snow sports, want to share your passion with others, and live to travel, I recommend doing this program.”

Patricia, Northstar

“Getting paid to snowboard is so amazing!!

...I do not want to go back to my other job!

Everyone who has a passion for the sport should at least try this out for a season!”

McKenzie, Northstar

“The EA program helped me get the coolest job in the world. I came in with the EA program in November and it was my seamless entry into the industry! When I started I knew a little about snowboarding and nothing about instructing.

I received some of the best training available on the mountain and after a successful level one exam, I was fully prepared and fully qualified to begin instructing.”

Robby, Northstar

“I choose to do the ultimate plus programme because it would give me the best chance at getting an instructing job in the future.

Being able to ski every day if you wanted was the dream! ”
